

ABSTRACT

In a diagnostic method for a fuel cell battery, the amount of cross leak is determined by supplying the anode of the fuel cell battery with a hydrogen or hydrogen-containing gas, and supplying the cathode with an inert gas or vacuuming the cathode, and measuring the voltage of each cell.